My dear Mr. Bonsels,

It has been some time since my last letter to you in reply to your letter to me of last June.

Since I have not heard any further word, I was somewhat concerned as to whether you had received the letter and the packages which I have sent. We have heard of a number of instances where packages forwarded have never reached their destination, and I am wondering what happened in your case.

As stated in my other letter, I sent your book to Professor Leopold and even tried to get him on the telephone, but he was away on a holiday at his summer camp in Wisconsin.

The Misses Verotti and Testore are in good health. I have had to have repairs made to the Testore and with the removal of the top, the patches were thinned down a bit, giving a greater resilience of tone.

Of course, I wrote to the relatives of Miss Bachofen and I assume that by this time they have been in touch with her.

I hope that this letter finds both of you in good health and with the best possible spirit compatible with the situation, and may the Christmas spirit prevail with you.

Very sincerely yours,

RJMCK:ES

Robert J. McKeever
