LOTTO dear,

Just a word, in a rush, to tell you that I have, and appreciate, your nice letter. What you say about Muzi sounds sad. It must be awful for Kuzi and for you. Remember me to him. I am looking forward to his autobiography: I am sure it will be a fine book. He has had (and is still having) such a rich, significant life, and he has been (and still is) living it with so much enthusiasm and open-mindedness. He has really a tale to tell.

As you may already have heard, I have a new job and am pleased with it. It's good to be out of the mud -- for the time being at least -- and to do some real writing again (not quite the kind of writing I'd like to do, but still...), and to lead a more civilian and more civilized kind of life. (What I enclose herewith is my contribution to today's Sunday issue -- just as a sample of the kind of work I am doing.) And then, of course, one really feels a little better now -- knowing that the war in Europe, and maybe in the Pacific too, is rapidly approaching its end...

Now I have to start a new piece, about the Vatican -- illustrated by Lt. Jack the Ripper, with a portrait of his Holiness, ~~signed~~ autographed by the distinguished model himself!
