Dear Jean Gould:

First of all, my congratulations on your self-earned check! The fact that your juvenile will be published under the auspices of Whitman makes a pleasant event even more enjoyable. I am looking forward to seeing this first product of your muse as soon as it is published.

It seems almost silly to assure you again how sorry I am that I cannot keep your story. It is a nice story though, and seems particularly promising to me as an opening chapter of a novel. I may have seriously considered its publication in this magazine if it were not for those annoying space conditions. I wonder if all other publishers have the same kind of trouble. However, with me, it becomes more and more of an obsession: I just haven't half enough space at my disposal as I would like.

Don't be cross and let me hear from you again.

Cordially yours,

Klaus
Mann
