Senator MURPHY, Mount

"From the European Life.
Some to American Army Life."

^{Proud & pleased. But!} Have to a ^{photo} giving, to begin with; for I haven't prepared anything that deserves ~~the honor~~

you to be called a regular speech, or a public address.

Trust, however, you may be lenient on me:

basic training is
a full-time job ...

especially for a fellow such as myself — that is to say, a man whose ~~at times~~ tastes and activities
were deplorably one-sided,
up to now —
purely cerebral; exclusively intellectual.

Example — for officers who try to make a soldier out of patience...

AMERICAN RED CROSS

Have just wind to sum up those experiments:
summary — entitled,
(in book form)

["The Turning Point"
35 Years in this Country.]

May read pretty much like the life-story of a bohemian — unrooted
fellow, a vagrant, disconnected — travelling
about: sole occupation:
to consume and to
produce literature.

Yet, there we are: To produce literature — to write books — requires
discipline:

III)

self-discipline 10, 12
hours a day patience;
tenacity more trying
More discipline in a sense, than collective discipline of Army Life.

The marvelous whistle
in the morning; the commands: "On the Ball!"
"Attention!" "Let's go!!"
— may be disturbing, at times; but it also makes things easier

* Intellectual self-discipline:

Father's example.
Regularity of his daily schedule —
like a monk; like a soldier.
