Dear Mr. Nover:-

Here is my first report on the new books by German authors in exile. I hope very much, that it meets with your approval. I know that it exceeds the 1500 word limit. I shall adhere to the size suggested by you in my future contributions. However, I was very anxious to furnish something really substantial in my first article, which is to serve as my introduction to your readers. I hope that you will find it possible to grant me more space, as an exception, in this case. You will possibly be surprised that the manuscript reaches you from California, instead of from Holland. In explanation I should like to say that I sent it to an acquaintance of mine in California, who has kindly offered to touch up my rather poor English style.

I should be very grateful, if you would send the copies - five at least, since I want to show them to the authors mentioned - as well as the honorarium to the following address:

c/o Querido-Verlag
Keizersgacht 333,
Amsterdam, Holland.

Very sincerely,
