Dear Mr. Gellé, -

your kind letter of March 1st has only just now caught up with me. Many thanks.

However, the script in question was never meant to be a short story and was never intended to be published in any way. It was and remains a film treatment and cannot and must not under any circumstances be published in any language or place.

Besides, you inform me that Mr. Ilyin's heirs prolonged the original contract with you, whereas the Thomas Mann-Estate whose executrix I am has done nothing of the kind. Nor could I possibly wish that you attempt to sell "Woman of a hundred faces" to anybody except a moving picture company. Should there be any interest in the above named treatment, I should of course be very glad to have you handle the matter and to cooperate with you as best I can.

Very sincerely yours,

Letters reach me safely at my permanent address:
