My retired sweetie, late beau, and permanent dear, -

this is just to say that you keep figuring in my thoughts though I keep failing to tell you so. I was - moreover - delighted with last year's Christmas card. Which is why I now feel like reciprocating. Much love and all my very best and heartfelt wishes.

"That damned ailment" has of course not been overcome and cannot possibly do so. However, one learns to live and work with that sort of thing. At least I have re-conquered the fine art of swimming, can walk for a few minutes at a time, can climb stairs, appear on TV, etc.pp.

I wonder wether you have found what you were looking for near the Connecticut or Massachusetts shore and what Ted is doing now. Has he gone as far as growing into a college boy ? If so, I feel confident he'll be both a goodish scholar and a number one athlete. And all this in spite of the fact that his dad once succeeded in breaking his ankle on a baby-hill.

Fare well, excellent bloke, give my tendresses to Kay, remember me to Ted ("I should then mobilize the British forces!") and believe in the affectionate loyalty of yogr

PS. Enclosed find proof of the pudding. Not only did I always manage to cook it in hospital but I took great pleasure in eating it. And you will neither succeed in finding a clinic where this is permissible, nor in locating a patient who would insist on it. So there.
