Darling Moura, --

as I hadn't heard from you and time was of the essence, I got in touch with merry old Elisabeth Bergner and have now decided to put myself into the hands of Prof. Trueta at Oxford. By all accounts he appears to be the right man in every respect, even from the human and political viewpoint. Trueta and I have been co-soldiers in Spain, and of all the wars I participated in the Spanish one is still my pet. Which does not in any way detract from my memories of the great Blitz and of our cosy get togethers in 1940 and the years to follow. Marvellous times, those, compared with the horridness of our day.

As soon as I know just when Trueta who is at present in Portugal istback in Oxford and just when he can take care of me, I shall let you know and do hope that you will come and see me in the hospital which, I am afraid, will turn out to be rather "miterized". Never mind.

As ever yours devotedly,
